ABSTRACT

Section 1 of this booklet presents a chart listing the 53 participating centers in the Local Cooperative Teacher Education Center (LCTEC) program, which is funded by the Texas Education Agency in conjunction with federal block grant money. The centers were developed to improve the quality of field experience programs for student teaching through cooperation between schools and colleges. The chart includes: the name of the teacher education center, cooperating colleges and universities, public/private school members, number of supervising teachers served, and total number of educators served. In section 2, a chart provides information on the contact person for each center, objectives and uses of block grants, and the level of funding for each center. Current LCTEC activities and objectives include: (1) selective recruiting of superior students into teacher education programs; (2) development of honors programs in teacher education; (3) creative re-training of teachers for areas of critical needs; and (4) field-based research in teacher education or teacher evaluation. Objectives to be accomplished under block grants include: (1) develop computer literacy among current and future student teachers and their supervising teachers; (2) improve inservice training for supervising teachers; (3) be more selective in recruiting supervising teachers; (4) improve the image of teachers; (5) upgrade the basic skills of student teachers; and (6) retrain current teachers for possible assignment to areas of critical need. Introduction

Senate Bill 8, Texas Education Code 11.311, passed by the 61st Texas Legislature in 1969 authorized the state's first student teacher centers and pioneer efforts to help the colleges and universities, public school districts, and professional associations work together to improve future classroom instruction. Local cooperation proved to be highly effective in strengthening the ability of supervising teachers to guide the efforts of student teachers during their required apprenticeships in the elementary or secondary school classrooms. Salary stipends for supervising teachers and other support costs were funded by the Legislature.

Twelve years later the 67th Texas Legislature passed House Bill 48, Texas Education Code 11.311, which changed the name to Local Cooperative Teacher Education Center (LCTEC). There are 53 of these centers operating throughout the state. While the 1981 state legislation provided funds to support certain LCTEC activities, the appropriation was insufficient to finance necessary inservice programs for supervising teachers. For this reason, the State Board of Education in July 1982, allocated $500,000 of federal block grant money to support LCTEC activities during the 1982-83 school year.

In August 1982, the Texas Education Agency sent a Request for Application to each of the 53 centers, authorizing them to apply for funding under the federal Education Consolidation and Improvement Act of 1981. The centers could submit applications for funding based on $50 per eligible supervisor of student teachers assigned during the 1981-82 school year. However, these funds under federal guidelines would supplement and not supplant any state money.

As a result, the centers were given the opportunity to expand their current activities to include but not be limited to the following areas:

- Selective recruiting of superior students into teacher education programs;
- Development of honors programs in teacher education;
- Creative re-training of teachers for areas of critical need; and
- Field-based research in teacher education or teacher evaluation.

Applications for funding were received from 50 of the 53 centers requesting support for projects which would involve 61 Texas colleges and universities and more than 400 school districts and private schools. A total of 8,451 supervising teachers qualified for funding under the program. However, some 24,398 educators throughout the state would be served directly or indirectly by the centers. Applications were approved to receive $462,886 in federal funds through the Texas Education Agency.

The list of objectives to be accomplished under the grants includes:

- Develop computer literacy among current and future student teachers and their supervising teachers;
- Improve inservice training for supervising teachers;
- Be more selective in recruiting supervising teachers;
- Improve the image of teachers;
- Upgrade the basic skills (math, reading, writing) of student teachers; and
- Retrain current teachers for possible assignment to areas of critical need.

The Texas Education Agency will require an evaluation report on each funded project by the early fall of 1983.
